HOW SAN FRANCISCO "AIDS" THE INTERIOR.

The California Spirit of the Times opens the door to an important truth when it says, referring to the threadbare iteration of "how much San Francisco does for the State," that it is an excuse forever preferred by its people for attempts to absorb the vitality of the interior:

It must not be lost sight of that there are two growing empires in California, one of San Francisco and one of the interior. The one is the great empire at the north, of which great empire at the south, of which Los Angeles is the center. Our point is that the time has come when the business men of San Francisco than to-day; because they should so elect Los Angeles on one hand and San Francisco on the other, and when it comes into a very unequal and unpleasant shape, it will be a burden to the people of San Francisco, a burden which has pained both points upon a plane of entire independence of San Francisco.

Again we say let San Francisco cultivate the interior, not repel it, do not shew discredit upon it, and we trust there will be better condition than now to establish that limit.

Yet at this very moment prominent citizens of San Francisco, representing her wealth, trade and political influence, are industriously engaged in an endeavor to cripple and destroy five of the District Agricultural Associations and the State Agricultural Society, by "running" a "fain" in opposition to them. No excuse is offered for this unmanly and shortsighted action; it is a case of pure cussedness, to use slang, which belies the reference. The year is long enough to enable the San Francisco fair to be held without conflict with the dates of the interior expositions, which, of necessity, are seasonable fairs, and the dates of which cannot be moved forward or back. A more ungracious act has not characterized the selfish spirit of San Francisco than the flat opposition she is making to the interior expositions of products of the soil in the interior. Not content with crossing the dates of the Agricultural Society's with that of the Mechanics' Institute Fair, the "committee" of "leading citizens" are now serving as a mask to the Institute in its endeavor to add an exhibition of stock and a speed programme to the San Francisco "show." Pe-haps these public-spirited people, some of whom have business houses in the interior, and draw their chief profits from country trade, will venture to explain how the District and State Societies are to be benefited, or the interior to be advanced and its development encouraged, by opposition to stock exhibitions at San Francisco, as a supplement to a fair, the lawful purpose of which bears no relation whatever to agriculture or stock-breeding? These gentlemen will learn in time that the people of the "cow counties" have a realizing sense of what constitutes loyalty to their own, and fully understand the peculiar methods San Francisco adopts to foster the interior.

"ALOOF FROM DETRACTION AND JEALOUSY."

The charms of nature in Northern and Central California are very great, and her agricultural products are of the highest quality, in some respects differing from those of Southern California, by no means limited. Los Angeles Times

For which gracious concession the northern and central section gets down upon its marrow bones, to be sure. We trust that the statement below, extracted from the same article, is wholly and accurately true; for it is a tradition in this section that our good friends of the south had to tell our cousins of the East some marvelous tales of snow and ice, and freezing winter, and orange trees moved into the kitchen over night in the "north section." However this may be, an error, not merely a jesting yawn, for the Times says:

When other topics fail of interest, the press of Los Angeles finds texts for column editorials upon the "division of the State." Just now the "division" question is being "whooed up" by the Los Angeles Advertiser, and, as a result, the decision of the Supreme Court in the drainage claims case is taken. It appears to the benighted up this way that Southern California is deeply interested in having the State do justice to her citizens in every section.

upon us." No one wishes to do so. Northern California waits the South to have all that comes to it, and as much more. Its prosperity is ours; its building up of the State is ours. We have not here so much jealousy of the splendid South as would kick the beam with a mustard seed in other scale:

The most that she can accomplish is to attract a portion of it to herself, and to interest the people of the interior. Still, in the era of travel in the peculiar advantages which she has to offer him. No one questions the probability of many portions of the Northern California.

We hope to do more than "interest" the home-seeker who comes by way of the northern and central lines. Such as otherwise reach the State and seek out we shall certainly endeavor to keep. There is and will be no attempt to divert the causes of prosperity from the south, or turn the flood of immigration this way that flows to it. At the same time it is kept in mind that the south has no mortgage upon travel into the State by any route, nor will the north yield to it the sole right to advertise the State in any section. Let the south understand, once for all, that Central and Northern California is with her in all legitimate efforts to people the State and make known its splendid advantages; and that while we have a special liking for the sweethearts in our street, we are rejoiced to see the loyal, partisan preference manifested for the south by its people. They would be unworthy their noble heritage were they less true to it. The north applauds the exclamation of the Times when it says:

"The grandeur of California's future it is impossible to predict if every section of the State works wisely for its own upbuilding, and keeps itself aloof from destruction and jealousy."

The San Francisco Report, which seldom has a pleasant word for Sacramento, or the grace to do it justice, speaking of the spirit of enterprise now manifested in this city, surprises us by saying: "It speaks well for Sacramento. It shows that it knows how to prepare for and how to bring about a boom. That the way to prepare for and bring about a boom is to have the city clean, attractive, and pleasant in all respects for visitors and residents alike." Whereupon the Marysville Democrat advises Marysville to follow the example of Sacramento, and prophesies great results.

Let us amend: we would have Sacramento follow the example of a citizen of Yuba county, who is putting his money into irrigation works, that in a few months will water all the land between Marysville and the hills over the area of a broad, fertile belt. The water is to be brought down to the very gates of Marysville. This marriage of land and water will work wonders for Marysville—will hardly reach one-third of the average product.

England and Russia are jealously watching one another's movements in the vicinity of Afghanistan. Sixteen persons lost their lives by a landslide in Panama.

Important reports come to hand concerning the health of Governor Bartlett, who is sojourning at Highland Springs, Lake County. The Governor himself, however, states that his health is improving.

The soldiers surprised the main body of the Apache renegades on Rincon mountain and captured their horses, etc.

HOW SAN FRANCISCO "AIDS" THE INTERIOR.

Discussing the question "What shall we do with our boys?" the Tuolumne Independent says:

If the old of the trade unions in forbidding employment of apprentices be to better the condition of laboring men by creating an enforced apprenticeship, it is a mere trumpery, to say the least, to tell us that some part of the poverty-stricken parents relieve themselves of the burden of supporting their offspring, and reduce the number of apprentices by sending them to the time the apprentices are to be sent to the saloon conducted by Rev. J. E. Benton, Senator Whitney reading one of Beecher's sermons. In the evening Mr. Lawless, the Chief of police of Yerba Buena, explained to the passengers assembled in the saloon some of the principles of navigation.

Tuesday morning we sighted land to the southward—the island of Molokai. In a little while Diamond Head, a tall precipice at the entrance to the harbor, came into view. We were then boarded by a pilot and several Masons who came out to meet us. At 12 o'clock noon we arrived in the port of Honolulu, Island of Oahu. As we drew near the shore the fanfare of all the tribes was heard.

There is one class of persons who fully deserve their fate. I refer to a long-decrepit class of wretches who often frequent "the road," and who generally come from and are the scum of the great cities, where they have been浪迹 and degraded into wretchedness. But, however, a large percentage of the "men on the road" are through bad luck and bad treatment. To such let the people of California lend a helping hand, and when they hire them, let us not consider them as vagabonds, and not as criminals. "Arizona Traveler."

CO-OPERATION.

PROPOSITION FOR ITS ADOPTION
AMONG FRUIT-GROWERS,

To Secure a Sure Market to Orchards, and All the Profits on Their Fruits.

ED. RECORD-UNION: Having noticed that the columns of your valuable paper are open for the discussion of such suggestions as will help develop the resources of this section, I trust that you will give space to the following ideas, which, although dealing exclusively with the promotion of the interests of the farmers, ought to be worth the earnest consideration of every one who admits that the prosperity of the farmer—especially the small farmer—is indispensable to the prosperity of the community.

For the greatest part of farming done in this favored spot of earth is fruit-growing, ranging from the high-toned orange down to a common apple, the bulk of which, however, consists in growing peaches, apricots, plums and pears. In order to make fruit-growing outside of a pleasant occupation, also a profitable one, two well-disposed factors are necessary: first, that there are no smokes; second (and by far the most important one), that the consumer (in form of the shipper or canner) smiles.

The friendly disposition of the first one is evident. The second, the most difficult, literally takes the taste of the finest fruit, which only the fortunate combination of unsurpassed climate and soil can produce. This ought to be a sure means to swell the market account of every fruit-grower in the state. But, has it been said? Will it be in future?

M. Clement and M. Foacher, editors of the Paris National, have fought a bloodless duel.
